

CAMERON WILLIAMS

Cameron Williams is the current sports anchor for National Nine News Sydney.

Born in Emerald, Queensland, Cameron's journalism career began in 1984 with a Cadetship at the Courier Mail newspaper in Brisbane.

From there Cameron moved to The Australian newspaper where he wrote sports features and columns before joining the Seven Network in 1988.

Apart from his main role as Seven News presenter, Cameron also hosted the 11am timeslot program Sports World and the Barcelona Olympics where he called Matt Ryan's equestrian double gold for Australia.

In 1996, Cameron signed as the face of Fox Sports for five years, anchoring NRL on Fox, Dally M Awards, Super 12 Rugby, Wimbledon, Winter Olympics, the Australian Motorcycle Grand Prix and Fox Sports news.

Since joining the Nine Network 2006, Cameron has covered Nine's horse racing coverage, is a guest reporter for 60 minutes and fronted the Vancouver Winter Olympics, as well as Nine's coverage of the London Olympics. Cameron also reported on one of Australia's biggest national disasters being the 2010 Queensland flood crisis along side Today Show's, Karl Stefanovic.

Cameron is now the Sport Anchor on Channel Nine's 6:00pm National News

In his downtime, Cameron loves to spend time with his wife Natasha and two kids Arkie and Remy and says life is busy but very enjoyable. Cameron is also available for MC and corporate presenting work.
